

Richard S. MacNeish papers, 1929-2001: A Finding Aid

Descriptive summary

Repository: Robert S. Peabody Museum of Archaeology

Collection number: 101.12

Title and dates: Richard S. MacNeish papers, 1929-2001

Creator: Richard S. MacNeish

Size: 86 linear feet (70 record cartons, 18 document cases, 6 flat boxes)

Language(s) of materials: The materials are predominantly in English, though some project fieldwork records are in Spanish and Chinese. A limited number of reference materials are in Spanish, Portuguese, Chinese and Japanese.

Abstract: This collection is comprised primarily of papers documenting Richard S. MacNeish's archaeological and anthropological research, scholarship, and other professional activities.

Provenance

These papers were donated to the Robert S. Peabody Museum of Archaeology by Richard MacNeish in 2000, with the exception of the slides comprising Series XI, which were donated to the museum by MacNeish in 1994.

Processing information

This collection was inventoried at the item level by various staff members and students over the course of fifteen years, 2001-2016. Additional work during this period consisted of rehousing (some folders were replaced and some photographs were sleeved), separation of some of the photographic material, separation of some of MacNeish's personal library from his papers, and identification and description of materials by Jane Libby (MacNeish's associate and partner at the end of his life). In 2016-2017, archivist Irene Gates completed the separation of the photographic material and MacNeish's personal library, intellectually and physically reorganized materials into series, foldered loose items, rehoused materials into new acid-free boxes, and created this finding aid. Information in the finding aid in brackets was supplied by the archivist; all non-bracketed information was transcribed directly from the materials.

Museum records indicate that the bulk of the papers came to the museum in eleven installments, but which materials came when and exactly how they were boxed up when the transfer to the museum occurred was not documented. Therefore, how these papers were originally organized by MacNeish is unclear, and for ease of research access the archivist grouped similar materials topically or chronologically into series. The only exception is MacNeish's reference material (Series VIII). According to a former museum staff member, MacNeish kept folders of papers, loose papers, journals and books interspersed on shelves, organized by geographic region or topic, and this order was preserved to the greatest extent possible.

Conditions governing access

This collection is open for research, though documents containing personal, financial and/or medical information may be restricted.

Biographical note

Richard Stockton "Scotty" MacNeish (1918-2001) was a significant figure in American Archaeology in the second half of the 20th century. His style of interdisciplinary team archaeology focused on the origins of agriculture in the New World and resulted in major excavations in Mexico, Peru, and Belize. The projects in the Tehuacán Valley in Mexico and the Ayacucho Valley in Peru established deep cultural sequences and provided crucial insight into the process of plant and animal domestication. These oft-cited works are considered some of the most important interdisciplinary studies of 20th-century American archaeology. MacNeish's contributions to archaeology were acknowledged through more than a dozen medals and honors, including election to the National Academy of Sciences in 1974.

MacNeish was born in New York City to parents Harris Franklin and Elizabeth Stockton MacNeish. He grew up in Eastchester, NY, and received his BA (1940), MA (1944) and PhD (1949) from the University of Chicago. He was married, first to June Helm, 1945-1958, then to Diana Walter in 1963, with whom he raised two sons, Richard Roderick and Alexander Stockton. He was Senior/Chief Archaeologist at the National Museum of Canada, 1949-1962, and headed the University of Calgary's Department of Archaeology, 1964-1968. In 1969, he was appointed the fifth director of the Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archaeology, staying there until 1983. From 1982-1986 he taught in the Department of Archaeology at Boston University. In 1984 he established the Andover Foundation for Archaeological Research (AFAR), a non-profit organization that served to fund his excavation projects. He died at age 82 in Belize.

Scope and content

These papers document Richard MacNeish's scholarly and professional life, from his graduate studies and early career up until his death. They contain fieldwork and project administration records, correspondence, photographs and slides, manuscript drafts and final publications, reference materials, and to a small extent, lecture and course materials, and family, financial and medical information. Particularly well documented are the administration of the Andover Foundation for Archaeology (AFAR) and the fieldwork projects carried out under its auspices in New Mexico in the 1980s (Las Cruces and Orogrande (Ft. Bliss)), in China in the 1990s, and to a lesser extent, in Belize in the 1980s; MacNeish's correspondence; reference materials on a variety of topics relevant to his research; early career fieldwork records from Tamaulipas, Mexico, on which MacNeish wrote his doctoral dissertation and additional later publications, and photographs and field notes from his surveys in the Yukon (Canada) in the 1950s. Also documented are the administration of the Ayacucho Archaeological-Botanical Project (Peru), MacNeish's directorship of the Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archaeology, other early career fieldwork projects, MacNeish's professorship at Boston University, and biographical information about MacNeish and his family.

These papers do not include the correspondence and museum records left at the Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archaeology when MacNeish's directorship of the foundation ended in 1983 – those records have been processed as a separate collection, the Richard S. MacNeish records.

Series II. Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archaeology, 1939-1990 (bulk 1968-1983)

Scope and content: This series contains administrative and publication records from the Ayacucho Archaeological-Botanical Project (Peru), sponsored by the Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archaeology, as well as records from MacNeish's time as assistant director of the foundation, 1968-1969, and director, 1969-1983, relating to other archaeological projects, legal research about the relationship between Phillips Academy and the foundation, and MacNeish's search for another position. Some of the legal research files contain materials predating his directorship. There are also files that contain materials postdating his directorship, added to files begun during his directorship, from the seven-year period in which there was no director at the foundation, 1983-1990.

Series III. Graduate studies (University of Chicago) and early career (United States, Canada and Mexico), 1937-1963

Scope and content: This series contains coursework from MacNeish's graduate studies at the University of Chicago, his master's thesis and doctoral dissertation. It also contains correspondence, and records from fieldwork projects through 1960, primarily in Tamaulipas (Mexico) and in the Yukon and Manitoba (Canada) and to a lesser extent in the Santa Marta Rock Shelter (Mexico) and in the United States, such as the Weaver site (Illinois). These records consist of field notes, photographs and slides.

Series VI. Writings and publications, circa 1925-2000

Scope and content: This series contains drafts and working files for publications, as well as offprints and magazine articles authored by MacNeish. It also contains scrapbooks on the Maya that MacNeish made in grade school.

Processing information: Publications that were judged to be easily obtainable by researchers elsewhere were removed from this series, unless they contained annotations by MacNeish or personalized dedications. Material whose publication status was unclear, such as reports, drafts, symposium papers, and newsletters, were kept within the series. Copies of offprints of MacNeish's articles were also kept. Documentation of all publications originally among MacNeish's papers is available for reference.

Series VIII. Reference material, circa 1931-2000

Scope and content: This series contains MacNeish's collections of journals, newsletters, articles, symposium papers, theses, books and reports on regions and subjects of interest to him. They occasionally contain correspondence, notes by MacNeish and photographs.

Processing information: Publications (books, journals) that were judged to be easily obtainable by researchers elsewhere were removed from this series, unless they contained annotations by MacNeish or personalized dedications. Material whose publication status was unclear, such as reports, drafts, symposium papers, and newsletters, were kept within the series. Copies of offprints of MacNeish's articles were also kept. Only the first page of photocopied articles was kept. Documentation of all publications originally among MacNeish's papers is available for reference. The alphabetical ordering of these regions and subjects is the archivist's doing.
